

SUCKING UP THE RED

1ST VERSE

Kissed by your fruits
Though I sense no single word is true
Face after face in the ice
Is it fear in the strangeness of your smile

Maybe we could meet
And uncover guarded memories
Lying side by side, half unwilling eyes
No I Love you's, just gentle lies

2ND VERSE

We're styled yet undone
Borrowed pain, mixed in with the dark
Show me you're soft so warm a thing
The crescent eyes make me want it all again

BRIDGE

Sway we touch in the blue light
Hunger holding me still writes
We are.. I am ..You are...

The one that's half way there

The view's much better than I'm used to here
The sweet smell of skin undressed
Friends of friends might drown you yet
You're heavy up against
I'm sucking up the red

With eyes so wide and blue
Tall stiff wind, got it strong for you
Soothe me stay awhile, I need that
I love that new car smell
The one that's half way there
The view's much better than I'm used to here
The sweet smell of skin undressed
Friends of friends might drown you yet
Cause jam don't shake like that
You're heavy up against
I'm sucking up the red